We've reached an exciting point in the course - we'll now implement the Gale-Shapley algorithm for stable matchings.

The stable matching problem naturally arises in school admissions, matching transplant patients with organ donors, and pairing medical students to their first hospital appointments. This algorithm was recognized by the conferral of Nobel Prize in Economics in 2012.

Mark as completed